Jack Murphy: The Brand

As a third-generation Irish family business, we are passionate about creating beautiful, purposeful clothing that is made to last. Our trend-proof, sustainable 'slow fashion' women's and menswear collections focus on quality fabrics and styles.

We are known for our signature tailored design in outerwear and occasion wear, which feature waterproof and waxed jackets with complementary styles using Irish tweed and wool based fabrics. Many of our styles are perennials, and we continue to be inspired by longevity and functionality compounded with style and precision tailoring.

Family and heritage are extremely important to us, and we take pride that these values are evident in the design and quality of every piece we produce. We aim to capture a sense of comfort, self-expression and pride when wearing Jack Murphy and in doing so pass this joy and jacket on to the next generation.

About Jack

Jack Murphy began his career in the garment industry in the 40's, specialising in corsetry.

Born in Dublin, Ireland in 1922, he like many at the time, served in WWII. He was a radar controller in the RAF, traveling all over the world to places such as Burma and Japan. After returning from the war, he moved to the seaside town of Skerries, Co. Dublin with his wife Frances and there, he started up his own niche corsetry business.

Jack's son Michael joined him in the business when he was 17 and began learning the garment trade. Design, pattern cutting, sewing, sales and distribution; they did it all from the factory in Skerries. With this expert knowledge of garment structure and ladies fashion, and taking the outdoor functional military attire into consideration, soon the Jack Murphy brand was born.

Now a third generation Irish family business, Jack Murphy specialises in outerwear and occasion-wear apparel with a particular focus on tailoring. Whether it is an oversized rain jacket or a full length tweed coat; functionality and reliability are still intrinsic to the design, but not at the expense of style and tailoring.

Jack was a family man, so it's no surprise that his son Michael and his granddaughter Sarah are continuing on his elegant legacy. Creating beautiful, purposeful clothing that is made to last; we are committed to slow fashion and tailored functionality in every collection.

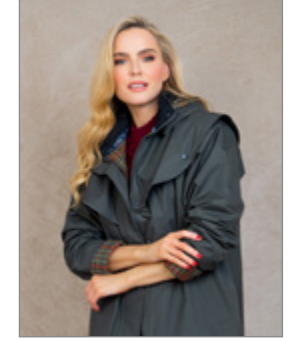

Staying true to these values, each piece still carries Jack's personal signature of authentication.

Our commitment to sustainability

As a family run clothing business, we are committed to sustainability, reducing our impact on the natural environment and being part of the change to a carbon neutral economy.

Even before sustainability was on the radar, we have been making clothes that last. To do this, we focus on the essentials - excellent design, quality fabrics & trims and precision tailoring.

We personally source all of our fabrics and trims to ensure they are ethically made, and that our partners are also implementing processes that benefit our environment. We are continuously researching for fabrics and processes that can expedite this.

We have implemented a new operational system based on forward orders for the majority of our sales. In doing this, we now create minimal if any product waste by operating on this make to order system.

Durability and longevity have and always will be part of our company values, and we will continue to look for ways that we can improve and make clothes that you can be proud of and trust.
